Mark Morris formed the Mark Morris Dance Group in 1980, and has since created more than 120 works for the company. Hailed as "the most successful and influential choreographer alive" by the New York Times, Mark Morris was the director of dance at the Théâtre Royal de la Monnaie in Brussels, the National Opera House of Belgium, and founded the White Oak Dance Project with Mikhail Baryshnikov.

According to BBC Music Magazine Mark Morris "has done more to dignify and illuminate classical music than any conductor or musician of the last 20 years."

His ties to the Bay Area are extensive. Morris has choreographed six works for San Francisco Ballet and his company performs annually at its west coast home, Cal Performances. Bay Area audiences have enjoyed everything from the elegantly classical "Sylvia" to the irreverent holiday favorite, "Hard Nut." His latest work, "King Arthur", has its US premiere in Berkeley at Zellerbach Hall, Sept. 30 - Oct. 7.

Josh Prager

In Conversation with Roy Eisenhardt, former president, Oakland Athletics

To baseball fans, October 3, 1951, is a pivotal date, when Bobby Thomson of the New York Giants hit a homerun off Ralph Branca of the Brooklyn Dodgers to secure a miraculous comeback victory for his team and win the pennant. Relive the "shot heard round the world" with Josh Prager, the writer who broke the story of its secret.

Adam Gopnik

In Conversation with Barbara Lane

Adam Gopnik has been writing for The New Yorker since 1986. His five years living in Paris with his family resulted in the international bestseller Paris to the Moon. His new book finds the Gopnik family back in New York City, which though rent by the events of 9/11, reweaves itself, reviving a world where Jewish jokes mingle with debates about the problem of consciousness, the price of real estate, and the meaning of modern art.
