ERIK SATIE

Born May 17, 1866, in Honfleur, France

Died July 1, 1925, in Paris

The 21 tiny pieces of this set represent the height of Satie's penchant for writing very short, humorous piano works. Eccentric in life as well as in music, Satie composed them in the spring of 1914 on commission from the magazine La Gazette du Bon Ton. The music notation was to appear in his manuscript, laced with verbal comments from the composer in elegant calligraphy, along with illustrations by Charles Martin—an amalgam of music, words, and visual art describing racing, hunting, sledding, flirting, and a range of other sports and pastimes. Delayed for a nearly a decade due to the complications of World War I, the project finally appeared in 1923. Satie's music was premiered separately in 1922 by the extraordinary young pianist Marcelle Meyer. The composer made it clear that any order of the pieces would do, provided the chorale comes first. This performance generally follows the published order.

Satie's music was the essence of whimsy, going all the way back to his early Gymnopédies, which remain today his most popular works. Adding humor to the mix, Sports et divertissements reveals a surreal mental landscape translated into sound. At an average length of around 22 seconds each, the pieces barely have time to present themselves before they vanish. The whimsical texts Satie wrote to go with the score include such absurdities as waves swamping tourists at the beach (Le Bain de mer); a golf club shattering to pieces (Le Golf); a bride awakened by Reveille (Le Réveil de la Mariée); and an octopus experiencing stomachache following the ingestion of a crab (La Pieuvre). (What a piece called "The Octopus" is doing in a suite devoted to sports and pastimes is anybody's guess.)

A number of pieces exhibit Satie's knack for Augenmusik, or music that directly imitates its subject. For instance, La Balançoire ("The Swing") rocks gently to and fro; flowing water and jumping fish can clearly be discerned in La Pêche ("Fishing"); and a little waltz climbs upward until a cascade of 16th notes brings us back down in Le Water-chute ("The water slide").

Rosicrucian mystic and Communist Party member, recluse and social gadfly, Satie thumbed his nose at any and all expectations. This work's opening chorale is case in point. Instead of a brilliant opening number, Satie gives us a stilt, heavy, note-against-note piece he calls Choral Inappétissant ("Unappetizing Chorale"). Satie wrote of it: "I have put into it everything I know about Boredom."

Trio for Violin, Cello, and Piano, S. 86 (c.1909/15)

CHARLES IVES

Born October 20, 1874, in Danbury, Connecticut

Died May 19, 1954, in New York

Charles Ives, today considered one of the founding fathers of American music—Bernstein called him “the Washington, Adams, and Jefferson” of our music—was known during most of his lifetime primarily for his innovations in the insurance business. (He developed the idea of estate insurance.) His music was too original, too radically itself, to find an audience in his day, and his personality was too uncompromising to allow him a place in academe. Ives studied at Yale University, where he confounded the composition teachers, who tried to get him to write like Brahms, by giving them scores that juxtaposed folk song and fugue, humor and sobriety, solid tonality and generous hints of the posttonal world to come.

Memories of Yale were central to the composition of his only work for the traditional piano trio instrumentation of violin, cello, and piano. Ives began the piece in 1904, completed it in 1911, and revised it extensively in 1914–15. According to a letter from Ives’s wife to the annotator of the trio’s world premiere in 1948, its three movements have exact parallels to aspects of the composer’s student years:

...the Trio was, in a general way, a kind of reflection or impression of his college days on the Campus now 50 years ago. The 1st movement recalled a rather short but serious talk, to those on the Yale fence, by an old professor of Philosophy—the 2nd, the games and antics by the Students on the Campus, on a Holiday afternoon, and some of the tunes and songs of those days were partly suggested in this movement, sometimes in a rough way. The last movement was partly a remembrance of a Sunday service on the campus—Dwight Hall—which ended near the “Rock of Ages.”

Sitting on the Yale fence was a privilege of upper-classmen, who there heard the wisdom of professors that didn’t always make it into classroom lectures. One wonders at the content of that “rather short but serious talk” by the philosophy professor, as Ives’s musical approximation of it in the first movement (Moderato) consists simply of 27 measures played three times. In the first iteration, we hear only the cello and piano; in the second, only the violin and piano. The third time through brings all three instruments together, yet there is the distinct feeling of violin and cello each going its separate way, bound only by the atmospheric piano.

The second movement, Presto, is labeled “TSIAJ,” which Ives said stood for “This Scherzo Is A Joke”—a redundancy, since the very word “scherzo” means “joke.” Perhaps Ives wanted to make certain his wide amalgam of fraternity tunes wasn’t taken as a serious medley, but as the crazy quilt it is. Among the songs woven into it: “My Old Kentucky Home,” “Sailor’s Hornpipe,” “The Campbells Are Coming,” “Long, Long Ago,” “Hold the Fort,” “There Is a Fountain Filled with Blood,” “Marching Through Georgia,” and “Dixie.”

Like the first movement, the second has a feeling of separate voices going about their business, side-by-side, yet apart. The various tunes vie for attention, but are drowned out by the entrances of the others. Only in the final movement, a majestic Moderato con moto, does a feeling of unity arise. For the first time, all three instruments are playing the same piece, as it were. Still, there are the usual Ivesian quotes: from the hymn "Rock of Ages" near the end, and, in a violin-cello canon towards the middle, an anthem Ives had written for the Yale Glee Club—which had been rejected. In this sober and lyrical last movement, Ives may have seen the professionally challenging but artistically rewarding path that lay ahead.

Quintet in E-flat major for Piano and Strings, Op. 44 (1842)

ROBERT SCHUMANN

Born June 8, 1810, in Zwickau, Saxony

Died July 29, 1856, in Endenich, near Bonn

At any given time, most composers vary the genres they ply, turning from a chamber score to a symphony to a song cycle, one after the next, sometimes all at once. Not so with Robert Schumann, who preferred to concentrate on one mode of musicmaking at a time. Everything Schumann composed up until his marriage to Clara Wieck in 1840 was piano music. The marriage to Clara brought "the year of song," in which he wrote nothing but lieder. In 1841, Schumann composed two of the four symphonies he would eventually write, and in 1842 he engineered a year of chamber music, producing a piano quartet, three string quartets, a piano trio, and this, the most beloved of them all, the Piano Quintet in E-flat.

The quintet, now considered an indispensable part of the repertoire, was not well received in its time. Schumann was, in general, not highly regarded as a composer, his main claims to fame resting in his roles as a critic and a husband. In the former part, he spearheaded Romanticism, and brought to the public's attention the work of such composers as Chopin and Brahms. As a husband, he was widely known as "Mr. Clara Schumann," his wife having achieved renown as a touring virtuoso that far outstripped his as a composer. Whenever she could, Clara Schumann championed the music of her husband, including this score, but the audiences of the time clamored for hyper-virtuosic pieces of the sort Schumann didn't write. The 19th-century American pianist William Mason noted:

Schumann's genius was so little appreciated that when he entered the store of Breitkopf & Härtel with a new manuscript under his arm, the clerks would nudge one another and laugh. One of them told me that they regarded him as a crank and a failure because his pieces remained on the shelf and were in the way.

The piano quintet begins with unison flourishes. After running the bases of keys closely allied to the home key of E-flat major, the ensemble announces an expansive theme that leads to a long-lined cello solo that is the second subject. The second movement, a rondo, is labeled "in march mode"; the accompanying tempo of un poco largamente and the key of C minor clearly indicate the species of march as funereal. The main subject is sorrowful but not heavy or morose, the B section is caressingly lyrical, and the C section a protestation in fiery F minor. The scherzo is a celebration of scales, brilliantly deployed. After three movements of a light touch, the finale is surprisingly heavy in its duplemeter squareness. But the composer's sheer melodic invention and, near the close, his knack for turning the theme to fugal purpose, are compelling.

Kenneth LaFave is the author of Experiencing Leonard Bernstein and Experiencing Film Music (Rowland & Littlefield). He is also a composer whose works have been performed by the Tucson Symphony Orchestra, the Kansas City Chorale, and others.

Mark Morris Dance Group

The Mark Morris Dance Group (MMDG) was formed in 1980 and gave its first performance that year in New York City. The company's touring schedule steadily expanded to include cities in the U.S. and around the world, and in 1986 it made its first national television program for the PBS series Dance in America. In 1988, MMDG was invited to become the national dance company of Belgium and spent three years in residence at the Théâtre Royal de la Monnaie, returning to the U.S. in 1991 as one of the world's leading dance companies. Based in Brooklyn, MMDG maintains strong ties to presenters in several cities, most notably to its West Coast home, Cal Performances in Berkeley, California, and its Midwest home, the Krannert Center for the Performing Arts at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. MMDG also appears regularly in New York, Boston, Seattle, and Fairfax. The company has performed at New York City Center's Fall for Dance Festival, regularly performs at Lincoln Center's Mostly Mozart and White Light Festivals, and collaborates yearly with BAM on performances and master classes. From the company's many London seasons, it has received two Laurence Olivier Awards and a Critics' Circle Dance Award for Best Foreign Dance Company.

Reflecting Mark Morris's commitment to live music, the Dance Group has featured live musicians in every performance since the formation of the MMDG Music Ensemble in 1996. MMDG regularly collaborates with renowned musicians, including cellist Yo-Yo Ma, pianist Emanuel Ax, mezzo-soprano Stephanie Blythe, and jazz trio The Bad Plus, as well as leading orchestras and opera companies, including the London Symphony Orchestra, Metropolitan Opera, and English National Opera. MMDG frequently works with distinguished artists and designers, including painters Robert Bordo and the late Howard Hodgkin, set designers Adrienne Lobel and Allen Moyer, and costume designers Martin Pakledinaz and Isaac Mizrahi. MMDG's film and television projects include Dido and Aeneas, The Hard Nut, Falling Down Stairs, two documentaries for the U.K.'s South Bank Show, and PBS's Live From Lincoln Center. In 2015 Morris's signature work L'Allegro, il Penseroso ed il Moderato had its national television premiere on PBS's Great Performances. While on tour, MMDG partners with local cultural institutions and community organizations to present arts and humanities-based activities for people of all ages and abilities.

MMDG Music Ensemble

The MMDG Music Ensemble, formed in 1996, is integral to the Dance Group. The Ensemble's repertory ranges from 17th- and 18th-century works by John Wilson and Henry Purcell to more recent scores by Ethan Iverson, Lou Harrison, and Henry Cowell. The musicians also participate in the Dance Group's educational and community programming at home and on tour. The Music Ensemble is led by Colin Fowler, who began to collaborate with MMDG in 2005 during the creation of Mozart Dances.

American String Quartet

The American String Quartet celebrates its 45th anniversary in 2019. In its years of touring, it has performed in all 50 states and appeared in the most important concert halls worldwide. The group's presentations of the complete quartets of Beethoven, Schubert, Schoenberg, Bartók, and Mozart have won widespread critical acclaim, and its MusicMasters Complete Mozart String Quartets, performed on a matched quartet set of instruments by Stradivarius, are widely considered to have set the standard for this repertoire. Highlights of the quartet's 2018–19 season include additional performances of its major project with National Book Award-winning author Phil Klay and poet Tom Sleigh, combining music and readings in a program that examines the effects of war on people, their hearts, and their minds. The quartet also collaborates again with the renowned author Salman Rushdie in a work for narrator and quartet by the film composer Paul Cantelon built around Rushdie's novel The Enchantress of Florence. These imaginative projects cement the American String Quartet's reputation as one of the most adventurous and fearless string quartets performing today, as comfortable with the groundbreaking as with the traditional. Formed when its original members were students at The Juilliard School, the quartet's career began with the group winning both the Coleman Competition and the Naumburg Award in the same year. The resident quartet at the Aspen Music Festival since 1974 and at the Manhattan School of Music in New York since 1984, the American has also served as resident quartet at the Taos School of Music, Peabody Conservatory, and the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition.

In addition to performances by the Mostly Mozart Festival Orchestra, the festival now includes concerts by the world's outstanding chamber and period-instrument ensembles, acclaimed soloists, as well as opera productions, dance, film, and late-night performances. Contemporary music has become an essential part of the festival, embodied in its annual artist residency that has included George Benjamin, Kaija Saariaho, Pierre-Laurent Aimard, John Adams, and the current International Contemporary Ensemble. Among the many artists and ensembles who have had long associations with the festival are Joshua Bell, Christian Tetzlaff, Itzhak Perlman, Emanuel Ax, Garrick Ohlsson, Stephen Hough, Osmo Vänskä, the Emerson String Quartet, Freiburg Baroque Orchestra, Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment, and the Mark Morris Dance Group.
